

Best Interests of the Minor Child

Trial courts are required to make “best interests” findings of fact in each of the following circumstances: (1) when a parent seeks to terminate a full minor guardianship; (2) when a parent or the sole parent with right to custody seeks to terminate a limited minor guardianship and the parent has not substantially complied with the limited guardianship placement plan; (3) when the court, following a review if it is in the best interests of the minor child, decides to terminate the guardianship; (4) parenting time requests; (5) requests for removal of a guardian; and (6) custody and parenting time decisions. The probate court has jurisdiction and the family division of the circuit court has ancillary jurisdiction over the first five circumstances; the family division has jurisdiction over the sixth.¹

The following checklist is a helpful devise in helping to determine what the best interests of a minor child(ren) are. Also, this checklist provides valuable information to your attorney for representation and document preparing purposes.
